

Why Does My Car Need Preventive Maintenance?

Quick Facts about Preventive Maintenance

What's in it for you?

- A more dependable car.
- A car that retains the "new car feel".
- Less chance of a costly breakdown.
- A safer car for you and your family.
- Doing your part for cleaner air
- A car worth more at trade in or sale.
- An intact warranty.

Manufacturers know that a properly maintained car will be more dependable, safer, last longer, and increase your satisfaction with their product. Car makers and owners also have a responsibility to make sure emission controls receive regular service and are functioning properly. Regular maintenance helps accomplish these goals by keeping your engine running efficiently and eliminating potential problems that may leave you or your family stranded.

The manufacturer creates detailed maintenance schedules outlining specific operations to be performed on various components and systems. This is done at different mileage intervals to ensure proper operation and prevent premature wear. The manufacturer also indicates what services must be done to maintain the factory warranty and extended warranty.

Our service facility is equipped with an automotive information system that gives us access to detailed data in order to help us repair your car correctly the first time. It even lists high-tech specialty lubricants applicable to your make and model. In addition we have access to diagnostic information and factory issued technical service bulletins. The bottom line is efficient, dependable, and cost effective service for you.

